Course Description

In today's demanding and cost conscious market, therapists are increasingly required to demonstrate the efficacy of the interventions they use and the practice of sensory integration is no exception. This course will address this important need. The ability to provide evidenced-based practice is crucial for today's therapists. This course will provide therapists with key research to support the theory and practice of sensory integration. Evidence for the key points of the sensory integration frame of reference will be provided. Key concepts of sensory integration intervention will be presented and research on the effectiveness of SI intervention will be examined and critiqued. Information will be presented in a clear, ready to use format through lecture, handouts and case studies. Ample resources will be provided.

Level: Introduction to Intermediate

Course Objectives

- To understand key concepts of sensory integration theory and frame of reference
- To understand key concepts of sensory integration intervention
